Dear Hiring Manager,

Helping employers and clients achieve business development goals through graphic design work has been my primary objective for the past 20+ years, and I have thoroughly enjoyed the opportunity to make a difference within companies of various size and complexity. Whether supporting a well-established organization in improving its reach, or assisting a start-up operation in building business from the ground up, I have provided high quality input for sales and marketing campaigns that generated revenue gains and customer satisfaction. Therefore, I would like to submit my resume for the position of Graphic Designer and explain briefly below how my experience and skills can help your company's objectives.

My resume contains the details regarding my responsibilities and achievements; what I would like to indicate are the distinguishing factors that would allow me to help your company meet its goals:

- I can analyze in detail your company's marketing/sales objectives and maintain a singular focus on these goals while designing and developing graphic solutions.
- I can work effectively under your tight deadlines, manage the full cycle of your design projects, and serve as a key resource for your clients.
- I can collaborate with your employees on design work/projects and team with your company's external business alliances (vendors, partners) on marketing and sales initiatives.

My résumé and portfolio will illustrate examples of the diversity of my work, but I am certain that a personal interview would more fully reveal my potential and desire to work for your organization. I would welcome the opportunity to meet with you to discuss your needs and the support I can provide in helping you reach these objectives.

Thank you for your time and consideration. Please do not hesitate to contact me via cell phone: (206) 850-8680 email: lisapagedesign@mac.com or my mobile email: lisapagedesign@gmail.com if you have any questions.

Sincerely,
Lisa Page Prah/Ramey
